A Weekend in the Mountains

Last weekend, Maria and her friends decided to go hiking in the Blue Mountains. They wanted to spend time in nature and take a break from the busy city. They left early on Saturday morning and took the train, which was cheaper and more comfortable than driving. When they arrived, they checked into a small guesthouse near the forest. The owner was very friendly and gave them maps of the hiking trails. The group chose a trail that was not too difficult but still offered beautiful views of the valley.

During the hike, they saw many wild animals, including deer and colorful birds. The air was fresh, and the weather was sunny but not too hot. Maria took lots of photos because she wanted to remember the experience. In the evening, they ate dinner at a local restaurant. The food was delicious, especially the traditional soup made with fresh vegetables from the area. After dinner, they sat outside and looked at the stars, which were much brighter than in the city. The next day, they returned home tired but happy. Maria said it was one of the best weekends she had ever had, and they all agreed to go hiking again soon.
